Safar meaning "empty" or "void" from the Arabic word 'sifr'. Historically, it referred to pre-Islamic Arab practices of emptying homes for trade or war, or plundering enemies, but Islam rejects the pagan belief that Safar is inherently unlucky or brings calamities, emphasizing Allah's control and countering such superstitions

Sha'ban meaning "to scatter" or "branch out," historically linked to pre-Islamic Arabs dispersing for water or the month "branching" between Rajab and Ramadan. It's a significant time for spiritual preparation, as Prophet Muhammad ﷺ fasted often in Sha'ban, and deeds are presented to Allah (SWT). It serves as a vital bridge to the holy month of Ramadan, with its mid-point (Nisfu Sha'ban) often marked by special prayers and reflection on forgiveness and destiny.

ذوالقعدة

It's one of four months (along with Muharram, Rajab, and Dhul-Hijjah) in which fighting is forbidden, emphasizing sanctity and respect. Zul- Qa'dah meaning "the possessor of sitting," signifying a time for peace, truce, and preparation, especially for the Hajj pilgrimage in the next month, Dhul-Hijjah. It's a period for increased worship, charity, and seeking forgiveness, as good deeds and sins carry greater weight.
